

The Lives of Isaac Erin and Caroline Thurber

The Lives of Isaac Erin & Caroline Thurber is an extensively researched joint biography of Isaac Erin Thurber and his wife Caroline Butler. Both “Erin” and “Carrie” led very interesting and entertaining lives. The book begins with brief accounts of their parents lives and continues with their childhood and youth in pioneer towns of southern Utah, Erin's mission to the Southern States in the late 1800's, accounts of his mining exploits in Utah and Nevada, their first home in the Gold Mountain region, the settle of Camas Prairie and Manard, Erin's last illness and death in Boise, and Caroline's life as a widow for 48 years.

In addition to Erin and Caroline's lives, the book also includes much information regarding the Albert King Thurber and the John Lowe Butler II families, including stories by and about Erin and Caroline's parents and siblings. Those stories continue as almost all of their siblings moved in mass to Camas Prairie, Idaho and founded the pioneer town of Manard. The book therefore has extensive information and stories relating Camas Prairie in the early 1900's, especially as such relates to the extended Thurber and Butler clans.

This is a hard cover book, 522 pages, with smyth sewn library quality binding, and includes many photographs and images. Included free in the back of each book is disk containing an electronic version of the entire book with color images and photographs, which works well on various e-readers like Ipad. The disk also includes almost all the research information used in writing the biography, including several complete books in electronic form, journals, autobiographies, documents, deeds, maps, directions to family history sites important to the Thurburs and Butlers, and a multitude of photos.
